MEMORANDA.

Report of Haw. Bark Palea

Passage from Fetropaulski in Honolula: -Left Petropaulski on the Sath of Sepf r. had pleasant weather for the first first days set. On the 28th of Sepf. In lat 68 N. hon 178 E. hou is severe gale of wind from the SE, which weeved gradually to the NW, increasing constantly. At 11 p m on the 28th, the realiser points gave way; the realiser was secured with ropes as now as possible and when secured, left to drift in the secured of the side of the side of the secured of the side of as some as possibler and when secured, left to drift to time that it was impossible to take it on board or re-skip it. During the night, the leablings to be rudder partied and the rudder lost; the leablings to the rudder partied and the rudder lost; the skip string the time was hore-to, being kept up to the wind by means of the sails. This gale leasted until the let of Orl'r, the wind bluwing with great violence, with a heavy asc. On the let of Ord'r, rigged a spar out over the stern with grys, to assist in steering the ship; also purposes. After rigging out the spar and thats, put the ship on her course, steering with the assistance of these tool her units. We were unable to carry any sail except the weather glow of the foressal, the weekher clew of the freedomat double-redded, and

E. wind, frequently freshening into a gule accompanied by snow storms, made the season one of nameralelled severity. As the average catch of the Aretic fleet for the past senson has been greater than for many years previous, and when it is considered that nearly all the oil was taken during this severe Weather, some appreciation can be had of the indomitable perseverance and energy of those who brave the Brooks' speel cotton, ... dangers and discomforts of the Polar Sca in pursuit of "levinthan." The "coming man" will probably be a whaleman, and if he does not reach the North Pole, no one ever will; in fact, he is sure to do it, if he has reason to conjecture that by so doing he'll strike "ile."

Rowled, 4 That we support the existing laws in enforcing the fulfillments of contracts as provided for in Section 1419 and 1430 of the Civil Code. Resolved, 5. That we feel our interests and the interests of the planter, to be side by side. That while the planter produces and brings money into the country we shall produce and keep money from going out of the country. That while the planter employs unskilled and cheap labor we shall employ skilled and higher priced labor. Thus in connection with the planter opening a war for all classes of labor. We believe the result will be a more wealthy, more industrious, more virtaous and more enlightened community.
